On 24/08/2025, during a shift briefing, Luis Linson issued multiple ":bring all" commands despite a colleague's request to wait while preparing for uniform. When challenged, he responded dismissively with "Now please shut up" and "Right okay buddy."

He then used the term "mong", an ableist slur considered highly offensive. Another employee, Mr. Louie Dupree, immediately objected, stating the language was unacceptable and demanded accountability.

In addition, Mr. Linson made further inappropriate remarks, including referring to another staff member as a "prick" and using a tone that undermined team morale. He later refused to cooperate with the complaint process, saying:

"Nah I am good mate, not a situation that really requires a statement now is it. I said mong, end of."

The conduct displayed violates professional standards and internal policies regarding respect, equality, and workplace communication.

When I joined the shift, Luis ran :bring all multiple times, I asked him to stop whilst I got uniform to which I said I was already there and he bought again, I witnessed he said the word "Mong", Immediately I told him "How dare you say that, that is an abelist slang word that is absolutely pathetic and you should be embarrased", at no point did he apologies whatsoever and continued to in the briefing say "you do what you are told when you are told", I'm not being a brat but if serious demotion isnt awarded, I'm resigning

The use of that word is to defomate against people with learning difficulties.

Nah I am good mate, not a situation that really requires a statement now is it I said mong, end of.

@Luis Linson I said mong, end of.

What lead to this.

Like I said mate, not interested in giving a statement

Stressful shift snd the knob kept flying around and ignoring instructions mid briefing luis linson Aug 26, 2025 11:08 PM Now ladies, if thats all, close the ticket
